

SEEN HERE AND HEREABOUTS THIS WEEK BY THE TIMES' STAFF PHOTOGRAPHER

An octette of bathing beauties at the Tidal Basin Bathing Beach sat down in a row like this and let Carl Thoner photograph them. So here they are—and it's just another bit of ocular proof that Atlantic City's vaunted beauties and Los Angeles' famed beach stars have absolutely nothing on Washington's own beach-popularity-inducers. The Tidal Basin Beach is crowded every one of these hot afternoons with young people seeking relief from the heat.

Here is the man given credit for one of America's greatest war achievements, the invention of the underscan and underground wireless radio. He is Dr. J. Harris Rogers, who was snapped by the photographer in his laboratory at Hyattsville, Md., while listening in to trans-Atlantic stations. Dr. Rogers made it possible through his invention for submerged submarines to receive messages from not only land stations, but from airplanes and dirigibles. His underground system was used extensively in France near the close of the world war, wireless messages being dispatched underground from dugout to dugout, thus eliminating the dangers to life of couriers.

Printing Senator Harding's picture on this page—down below at the right, as we did, we could hardly omit to show you the Republican candidate's wife, to whom he attributes much of his success in life. This picture was snapped during the week on the porch of the Harding home in Washington.

It seems the proper thing for Presidents to be golf enthusiasts. Taft and Wilson find their recreation in that game, and now comes Senator Warren G. Harding, who aspires Republicanly to the White House, and who, as you can see by these pictures, is also a golf fan par excellence. These photos were snapped at the Chevy Chase links, where the Republican candidate often finds recreation and pleasure in a round or two.

The organ-grinders' union might have taken exception to Miss Jeanette McTwiggan's extraordinary activity in the collection of pennies, dimes, quarters and more—much more—during the past week, if it weren't for the fact that this pretty miss is doing it for Casualty Hospital. Miss McTwiggan, to aid in the Casualty's drive for funds, procured this organ and monkey and went out on the highways and byways, gathering in the shekels. Did she? We'll say she did—and so will you when you recall that she garnered about $125 the very first day. Now, isn't that something?
